

CHÂTEAU DE PIBARNON BANDOL ROSÉ 2014

“well worth the search... The Pibarnon rosé is about 60 to 65 percent Mourvèdre, with the remainder Cinsault. Unlike most Bandol producers, Eric de Saint-Victor, the proprietor, prefers not to use grenache, which he said would add too much fruit and alcohol to the rosé. Pibarnon’s unusual terroir, a combination of blue marl and limestone, yields a wine that is powerful yet graceful. The 2014 offers chalky licorice and saline flavors...”

Eric Asimov - NEW YORK TIMES

CHÂTEAU DE PIBARNON BANDOL ROSÉ 2014

“well worth the search... The Pibarnon rosé is about 60 to 65 percent Mourvèdre, with the remainder Cinsault. Unlike most Bandol producers, Eric de Saint-Victor, the proprietor, prefers not to use grenache, which he said would add too much fruit and alcohol to the rosé. Pibarnon’s unusual terroir, a combination of blue marl and limestone, yields a wine that is powerful yet graceful. The 2014 offers chalky licorice and saline flavors...”

Eric Asimov - NEW YORK TIMES

CHÂTEAU DE PIBARNON BANDOL ROSÉ 2014

“well worth the search... The Pibarnon rosé is about 60 to 65 percent Mourvèdre, with the remainder Cinsault. Unlike most Bandol producers, Eric de Saint-Victor, the proprietor, prefers not to use grenache, which he said would add too much fruit and alcohol to the rosé. Pibarnon’s unusual terroir, a combination of blue marl and limestone, yields a wine that is powerful yet graceful. The 2014 offers chalky licorice and saline flavors...”

Eric Asimov - NEW YORK TIMES

CHÂTEAU DE PIBARNON BANDOL ROSÉ 2014

“well worth the search... The Pibarnon rosé is about 60 to 65 percent Mourvèdre, with the remainder Cinsault. Unlike most Bandol producers, Eric de Saint-Victor, the proprietor, prefers not to use grenache, which he said would add too much fruit and alcohol to the rosé. Pibarnon’s unusual terroir, a combination of blue marl and limestone, yields a wine that is powerful yet graceful. The 2014 offers chalky licorice and saline flavors...”

Eric Asimov - NEW YORK TIMES